WHAT THIS DOCUMENT IS

The Price Guide for the Discerning Merchant is a tool primarily for Dungeon Masters, although players may find it useful as well, particularly in magic-heavy campaigns. This is a free document, and if anyone charged you money for it, ask for it back.

Simply put, the Price Guide for the Discerning Merchant is an alternate organizational tool for magic items that already exist under the rules in the D&D Fifth Edition Dungeon Master's Guide (DMG). It provides tables for magical items in many categories: all the swords are together, all the staffs are together, and so on, similar to how items were laid out in 3.5. As a DM, if I need to quickly find a sword to award a player, I want to know exactly where to look and what my options are. I'm aware that other such guides exist; I wanted one in neat tables.

ORGANIZATIONAL TABLES

The tables in the following pages are intended to assist in quickly finding an item of a particular type. If you're looking for a sword, alphabetical order isn't real helpful, since they might have many different names. The actual descriptions of these items, however, are not included; those must be found in the DMG. Reference page numbers are provided, along with their rarity, and suggested cost (rather than a simple range). Only items from the DMG are shown.

These tables follow the rules as written; they contain no homebrew information or modifications, and almost all the suggested prices fall within the ranges suggested for items of their rarity.¹

On all tables, items are sorted by rarity.

¹ With a few exceptions—it's doubtful that any player would dish out 25,000.5 gp for a Potion of Storm Giant Strength, even though that's the minimum "by the book" price for a consumable legendary item. These exceptions are few and far between, however.

Arcane circles designed by Obsidian Dawn.
